Program Description
The Literacy Lab will offer reading and language arts remediation and tutoring to students in grades three through twelve throughout the whole year in a one-on-one or small group format. The Literacy Lab has staff that are highly trained in working with students with learning disabilities and attentional disorders. Many students struggle in middle and high school since they did not have the chance to solidify their basic reading skills in the early grades. In most schools, the curriculum changes from "learning to read" to "reading to learn" around fourth grade, and at this point, many students who still struggle with reading and writing become frustrated and disengaged. The Literacy Lab helps these students fill in the gaps and become skilled readers and writers, enabling them to get back on track. To accomplish this, The Literacy Lab will use a program based on the scientifically-researched practices recommended by the National Reading Panel. Using a combination of phonics instruction, fluency practice, and a literature-circle, standards-based comprehension method, the Literacy Lab will keep pre-adolescent and teenage students engaged in their learning. By carefully tracking progress, students working with the Literacy Lab will be able to see their improvement in fluency and comprehension, making them more confident students. By integrating novels, newspapers, and other high-interest texts to connect to individual student's interest, students will come to enjoy reading and writing. The Literacy Lab will also offer summer programs for students, providing targeted reading and writing instruction for students based on individual needs to prepare them for the upcoming school year. The Literacy Lab will communicate information with parents and guardians to enable all stakeholders to work together to produce improvement.
